

Quintessentially Estates hires new business chief in Hong Kong

Former Christie's and Knight Frank man to drive expansion in Asia

Quintessentially Estates is gearing up for a major new business push in Asia.

The property arm of concierge giant Quintessentially has hired former Christie's and Knight Frank man Urosh Teodorovich as Senior Business Development Manager as it looks to expand its advisory offering in the region.

Fluent in Mandarin, Teodorovich has held investment advisory and management roles at both Landscape Christie's International Real Estate and Knight Frank in Hong Kong. His brief at QE will involve generating client leads across Asia, driving revenue and "enhancing international and domestic sales opportunities".

Urosh Teodorovich: "I am excited to start a new challenge with Quintessentially Estates and look forward to working with the team to further develop their already extensive property and client services suite. I am fortunate to be joining such a respected company that prides itself on top quality client service within the global property industry."

Penny Mosgrove, CEO of Quintessentially Estates: "The need for expert advice within Hong Kong for the global markets, including London, presented itself and Urosh's wealth of experience and industry knowledge within this marketplace makes him a key addition to the Quintessentially Estates family. The increasing demand from our clients led us to look for an addition to our team in Hong Kong who will fit in with our ethos of exceptional client service, and it is very fortunate that we were able to find someone of Urosh's calibre to fulfil this role. Furthermore, with his ability to speak fluent Mandarin I'm confident that he will play a key part in providing and implementing high quality client leads for our global service."

The London-based firm recently opened up a new office in New York City and operates across LA, Hong Kong, Portugal, Monaco, Switzerland and Dubai.
