

The Telegraph

Must be at least 10,000 sq ft, with a staff annexe, pool and gym': million-pound isolation properties

Those fortunate enough to have the means are in a hurry to tie up deals on secluded property

By Zoe Dare Hall
20 March 2020 • 7:00am

Cairnty Estate, a 586-acre sporting estate with a new Georgian-style country house on the River Spey in Scotland, on sale for £2.65m

Whether a last-minute luxury rental in order to keep their own homes virus-free, or a sudden escape to a rural hideaway, those fortunate enough to have the means are in a hurry to tie up property deals that will see them self-isolate in luxurious seclusion over the coming months.

“We’ve just received a request for an ‘isolation property’ in Mayfair for up to £15,000 a week. The client already owns in London but wants a rental apartment nearby so his newly refurbished home remains uncontaminated,” says Penny Mosgrove, CEO of Quintessentially Estates. As schools close, many wealthy Londoners who own country homes have already left town. “More space, fewer people and I’m told the food shortages and general unpleasantness in supermarkets is not happening in small villages, where much of the produce is local,” says Camilla Dell, managing partner at Black Brick buying agency....

To continue reading this article...

Start your free trial

Enjoy unlimited access to our unrivalled journalism. Try The Telegraph free for your first month, then just £2 per week.

Start your free trial

Already a subscriber?

Log in

[!\[\]\(de95854c7ee024cfadc48187bbb781b2_img.jpg\)](#) [!\[\]\(cef08d8c15d8a8acd5e25ab0d65432c3_img.jpg\)](#) [!\[\]\(c244836fd67166dc60ebf5279a0f8377_img.jpg\)](#) [!\[\]\(c9651b690bdf1dda88278b8b3445c7b1_img.jpg\)](#) | [!\[\]\(3edfc2ea96443450a4381cfaba839e65_img.jpg\)](#) 5
